DEDICATION

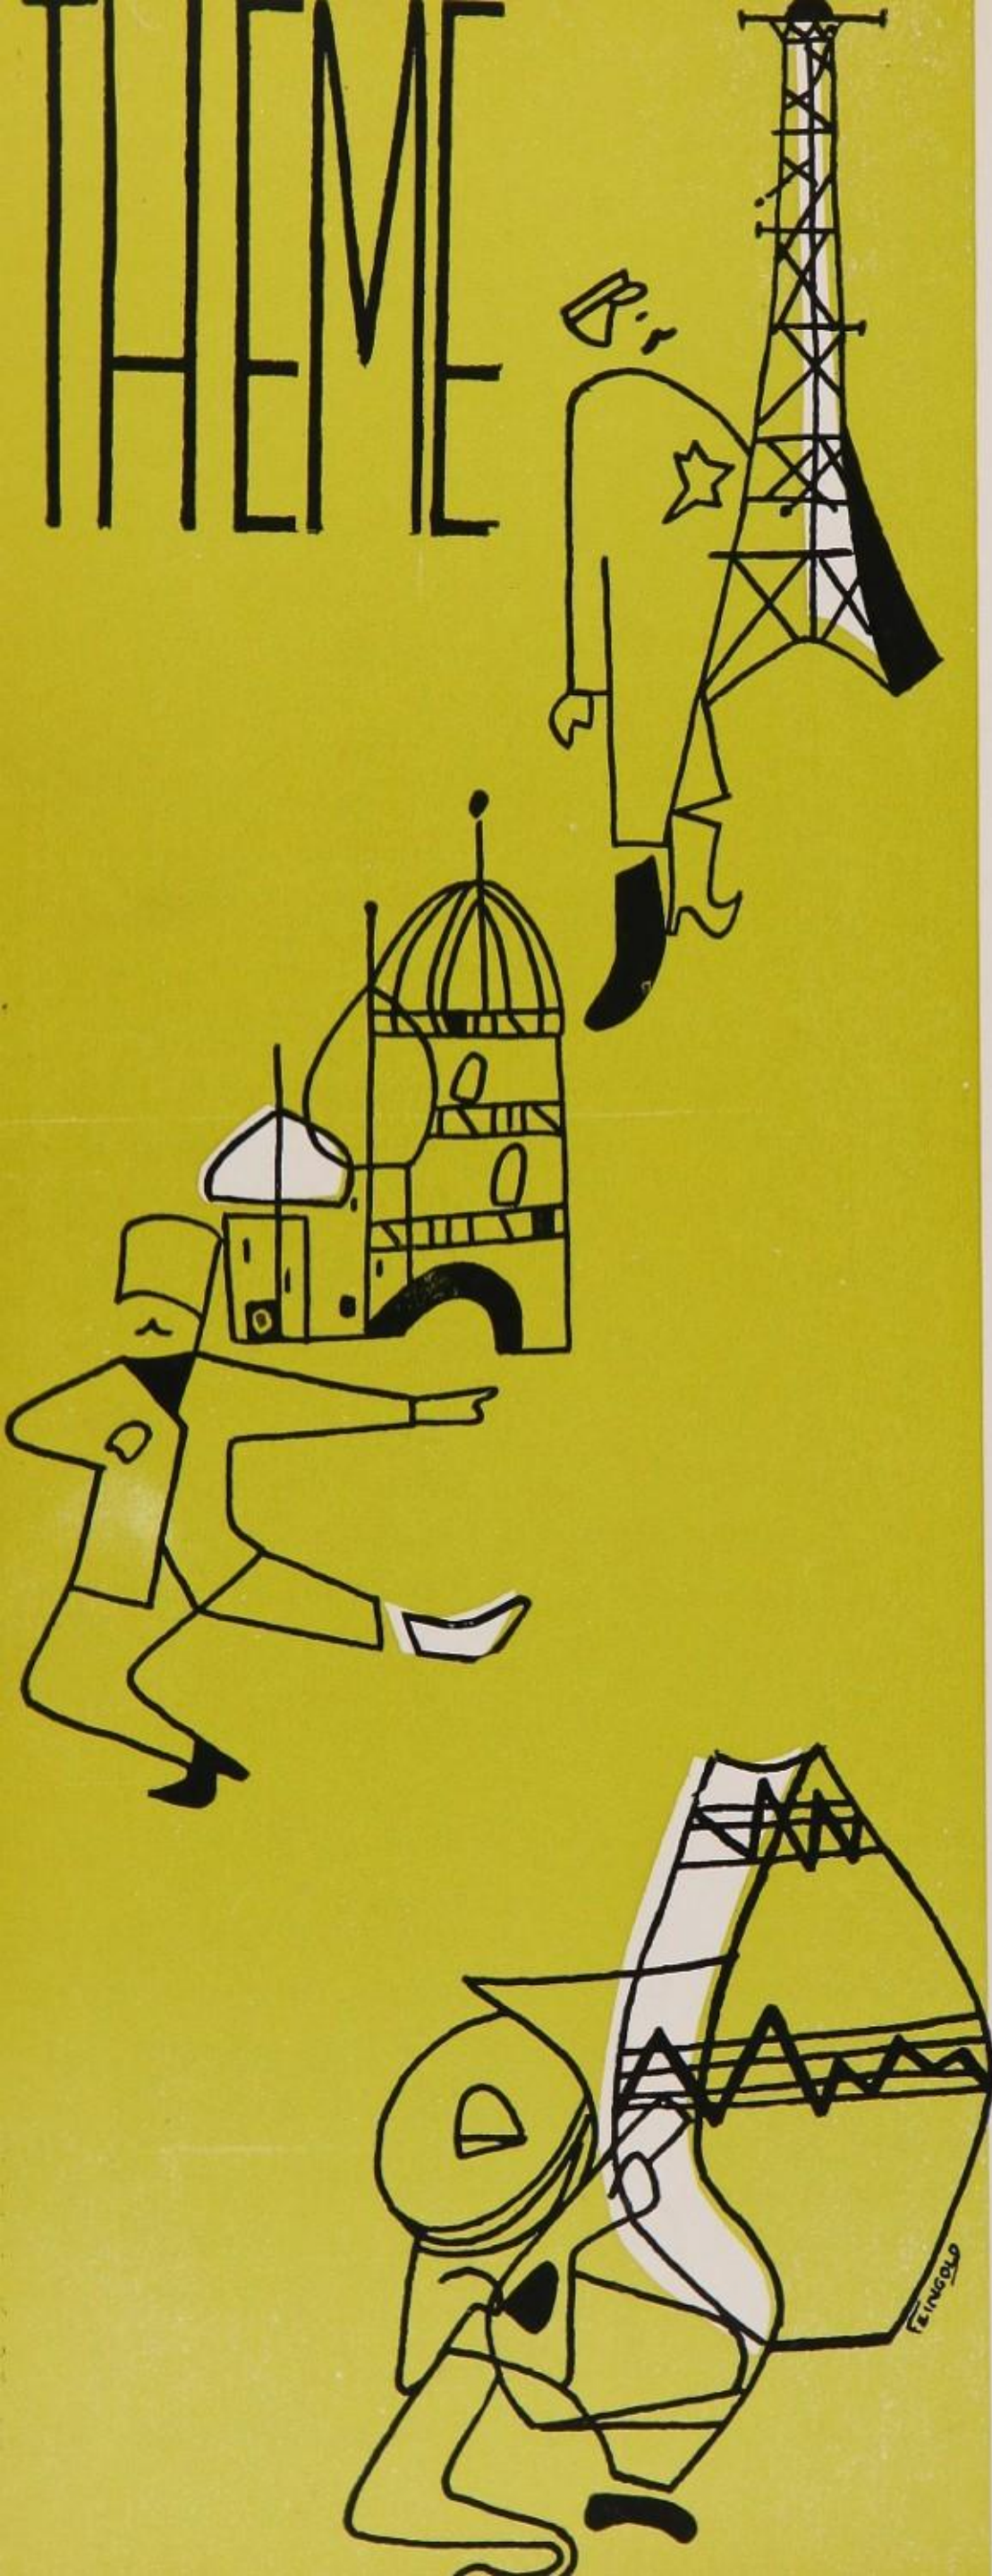

Because of your relentless fight for freedom and the contributions you have made in the field of education; because of the ideals and philosophy you have instilled in us;—to you, Dr. Lefkowitz, we dedicate our yearbook.

The democratic principles which you advocate, have been the motivation of your school leadership as well as the pattern of thinking in your political life. Throughout your seventeen years of service to Tilden High School, your aim has been to secure the basic rights of equality and opportunity for each student. You have made it possible for us to explore and develop our abilities not only for our own advantage, but for the benefit of society.

Despite the violent opposition you encountered as legislative representative of various organizations since 1916, you have succeeded in obtaining for other educators, the improved conditions which they truly merit.

Although you are taking your leave of Tilden, we know that you will continue to fight for the ideals in which you so fervently believe, for which you have made personal sacrifice, and to which you have dedicated your life. As we go forth we are privileged to take with us your inspiration of integrity, love of freedom and devotion to democracy,—an inspiration which will lead us to rich and useful lives.

MAN'S HOPE

In all his striving, man's eternal beacon is "Hope." Because of an innate desire to better himself and his environment, man has a compelling drive to establish a better and more secure life for himself and his children. This is the force and motivation behind almost every advance made in our civilization.

At various times, in the course of history, man has made progressive strides in eradicating social evils. Our own American Revolution is a shining hour in the story of human progress. However, the dramatic culmination of all effort and thinking in terms of social justice, has come in our own time; for we have been fortunate enough to witness a gathering of brilliant thinkers who formulated a document containing ideals which recognize the common basic needs of all people; "The Universal Declaration of Human Rights."

From the lessons of history have come the beliefs, ethical principles and standards for law. For this declaration, if implemented by law by the various sovereign nations, would give to so many, the equal civil liberties enjoyed by so few. Most important, it is concerned with the protection and security of the family as a social unit. Since the future of our civilization depends upon the well being of the family as a fundamental unit of society, the family must be assured of the satisfaction of certain basic needs;

The right to work.

The right to an education.

The right to religious freedom.

The right to live free from oppression and attack.

It is imperative that the realization of these human ideals benefit all mankind. Man's dream of a better world will become a reality when he understands the true meaning of "the brotherhood of man;"—that he is more like than unlike his neighbor.

Perhaps this idea might better be expressed in the words of Carl Sandburg, who said,

"There is only one man in the world,
and his name is All Men.

There is only one woman in the world,
and her name is All Women.

There is only one child in the world,
and the child's name is All Children."

The Principal Speaks

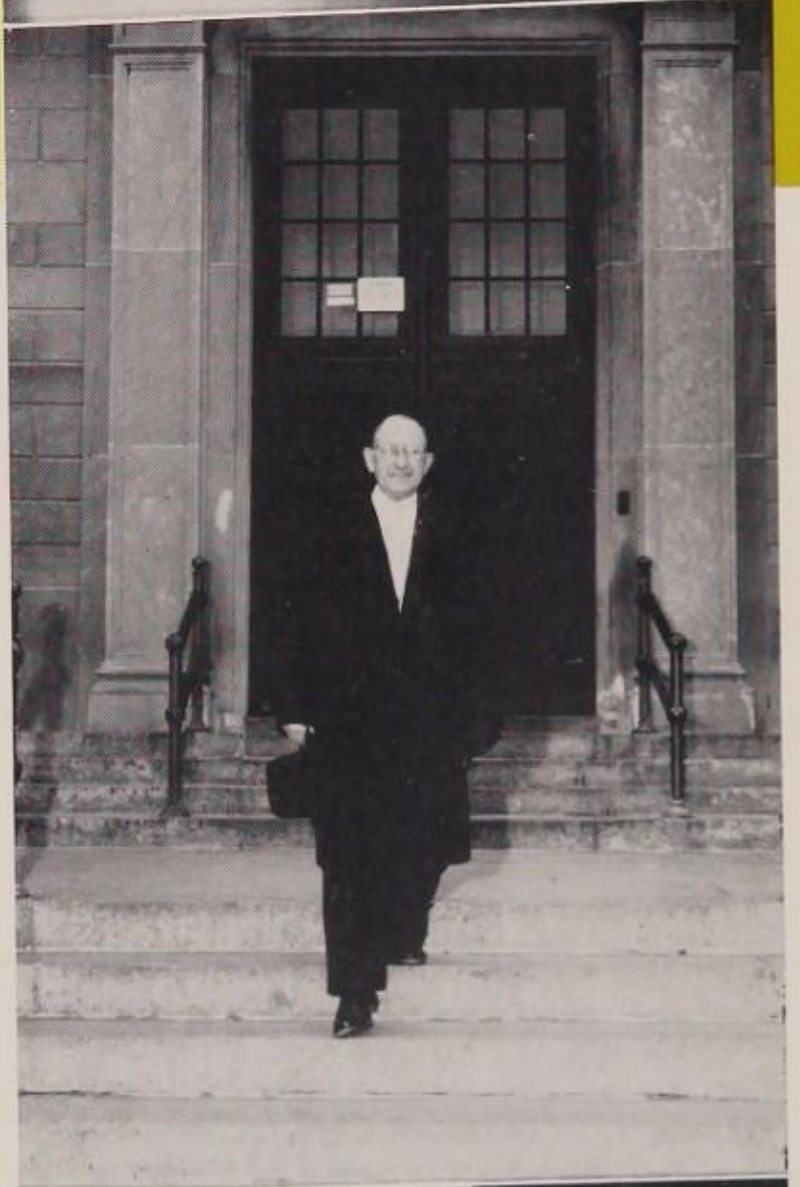

The forces of democracy and totalitarianism are working fast and furiously on atomic and other deadly weapons to be ready for the struggle we hope to avert—but which Communism regards as inevitable. Communism seeks to enslave the mind and body of man but democracy stands in the way. And democracy will use its know-how, its technology, its industrial might to preserve the peace. If we should fail—and we dare not—civilization itself may be undermined or perish.

Civilized man has sought and struggled for centuries to establish a free, peaceful world. Millions have thus far sacrificed themselves to make freedom and peace a reality. But alas, new ideologies rise anew to frustrate that hope—Nazism, Fascism and now Communism. Even the Russian people—if not terrorized by an all-powerful, brutal dictatorial government—would vote overwhelmingly for peace and freedom.

Man wants to live. He wants to be recognized as a human being with basic rights that are inalienable. Man seeks to be constructive and creative, not destructive; useful, not useless. Natural or unspoiled man seeks to work and to live in peace with his fellowmen—regardless of race, creed, color or origin. Only miseducated or ignorant man is intolerant, prejudiced, dominated by greed or lust for power. True education seeks to eliminate these wrong attitudes which spell trouble and keep nations and peoples divided. For centuries, man—inspired by idealists—has sought peace and brotherhood. The great men, the chief religions and the great educators and prophets have preached peace and brotherhood as two inseparables. Unless we attain these, civilization cannot survive. Our hope rests upon you—the youth of the world—who alone can help us build the new society and help its citizens to be motivated and inspired by love of their fellowmen. Like the great educator, Horace Mann, "Be ashamed to die until you have won some victory for humanity."

You and I leave Tilden together. You, to build a creative, useful life and I, to retire, not to hibernate, but to fight more effectively for things I value—freedom, equal opportunity and justice for all people. May you be inspired to live as did the prophets of the ages; may you, too, battle for great social causes; and may your fondest dream be fulfilled in a world at peace.

Guidance

With gratitude and deep appreciation, we who are graduating from Tilden High School will remember the help that was given to us by our guidance counselors. When we had problems pertaining to vocations, programs, choice of colleges, and even our personal life, the doors of the Guidance Office were open to us for counsel.

Strong are the many bonds of friendship that have developed between counselor and student. The personal attention that was given us was of vital importance in shaping our characters and personalities and in preparing us to find our places in this complex world. MAN'S HOPE

A struggling young Beethoven or Bach creates a masterpiece of tones and cadences.
His music, a peaceful valley, suddenly climbs to the tops of a mountain, then erupts from a hidden volcano, or rambles as a summer road,
or dances as trippingly as Harlequin and Columbine;

A strong and graceful part of a world very much pleading for strength and grace.
A jazz player, a smoky room, filled with giddy dancing couples is a part of the strength and grace.

So is a crooner; so is a coloratura, a torch singer, a Toscanini.

An orchestra reaches the heights of a symphony,

An audience stirs, as if some chord had suddenly reminded them of lost thoughts and dreams.

The actress takes her curtain calls, repeated again and again, in answer to the thunderous applause.

She has created a new being, a slice of humanity, drawn from the molds of their own flesh and blood, and they respond to this humanity with a touching sort of remembrance.

Again the crowd stirs, recalling, reliving a hope or dream,
but not quite understanding why. . . .

A painting hangs in a museum, in a gallery, or in a studio.
It brings forth a multitude of new intensities, new moods, and emotions of unexplored realms.

A world of flowing line, amorphous shape and fantastic color.
The awareness, the stirring again, the slow awakening of sensation;
The people beginning to see, to feel again,
But not quite sure. . . .

A book, a story, a poem sometimes bring to light the secret stirring.
The thoughts brought forth by mere words,
A love story, a sad story, a children's story, a funny story.
Perhaps the words will unlock the secret, the stirring of the crowds.

A child, laughing, screaming, leaping, thinking, hoping, creating,
And then they know the only key to life's own secret,
To happiness
To the meaning of things,
To knowledge.
In their one moment of gratifying success; for the birth of some wondrous work, lovingly created by the magnetic drive of creativity.
Their only hope, our only hope, to build with our own hands
the substance of our dreams;
To look up at the sky, to tomorrow;
To have the courage to hope, but not to hope alone,
To create the hopes until they are visions no longer, and are consummated in music, paintings, books and people, over and over again.
The dream of humanity.

LYNNE SHARON

THE CARNIVAL

The place danced with color
And the splendor and gaiety caught our eyes.
We were entangled in a maze of brilliance;
Our eyes jumped restlessly from place to place.
We gazed up at the wondrous sights,
The carnival was a ceaseless world and we were the inhabitants.
There was no time to stop and marvel at each point,
We had to move ahead;
Our feet seemed to fly to the next attraction.
Our naive minds tried to grasp all that we saw,
Searching—searching for something new, we continued.
The carnival was a game and we were the players.

We stopped only long enough to glance
And then ahead, we were attracted to something original
Something more ornate and flowery.
We dwelt at each place but a moment,
Taking little notice of the care and construction of each wonder
And then it ended . . .
Our path lay dark and uncertain ahead.
We tried to find our way back but all in vain.
As we stumbled along a virgin path
We could not retrace our steps and the road forged ahead.

As the new day dawned we looked back for a moment
Pondering over the past;
Our youth and mistakes were one and apparent.
We saw in the distance the ferris wheel—rusted by now,
It had stopped spinning.
The ice cream we held was melted.
As we turned to leave we saw others walking to the carnival.
They could not see the tarnish and the flaws.
To them it was as alive as it had been to us a short while ago.
We saw their smiling faces—the shine of innocence was upon them.

I turned about and I was alone.
I began to pursue my course with more certainty.
With each step the path which now loomed ahead became more clearly cut,
With each advance the light grew.
My paces were more lively and sure.
As I lifted my head and threw back my shoulders,
I saw ahead all the others before me . . .

Evolution Of A Tildenite

Alone, alone, all all alone,
A confused figure . . . the Freshman
Stands resolute, grasping an ice cream cone.
She's trampled in the rush . . . it's late session.

She swoons over seniors, those handsome young men
And cries in the lunchroom when parted from them.
Doing homework in a fog, her morale's getting low
For Caesar conquered Brooklyn, X^2 is H_2O .
Her first year ends, she's a veteran now;
She's learned to digest cafeteria chow!

Dirty bucks, argyles, and crinoline 'neath dress,
A typical figure . . . the Sophomore.
She thinks she knows all; no need to guess,
To her, reading Einstein is . . . just a bore.

She dreads, however, that sad day in June,
Her first regents test may be her doom.
With so much homework there is no time to sleep.
Her parents are frantic. They'd sell her bed cheap.
On her books she sports covers from one college or 'nother,
Cajoled from a girlfriend's good-natured big brother.

A Longfellow sweater, three sizes too big Hides a burdened figure . . . the Junior.
At football games she tackles her trig
While Arista warns . . . "That'll ruin ya!"

Now's the time to live, leave your mark on the school.
This thought soon becomes her golden rule.
For Boosters she tries, 'Get your ticket here, bub!'
Then she closes the school as a Topics cub.
The Twirlers attract our determined ingenue,
She hopes for the service "T" of the chosen few.

Tired eyes, writer's cramp and funds that diminish,
So ambitious! . . . the would-be graduate.
As our weary friend approaches the finish
She wonders and worries . . . what is her fate!

Her year is triumphant for seniors win "Sing,"
But more exciting is a classmate's engagement ring.
"I'll vote for you, be sure to vote for me,"
She promises many a celebrity.
Choosing a career brings about a big fuss,
But success is attained; June 29 . . . she's an alumnus!

A tale told by two idiots . . .
Signifying nothing!

These headlines from issues of this year's "Topics" highlight the meteoric rise of the Tilden basketball quintet from virtual obscurity to the PSAL Division II championship. It is fitting that this championship and the opportunity it gave Tilden to compete for the City crown at Madison Square Garden, should come during our school's twenty-fifth anniversary.

Under the tutelage of Coach Jack Krugman, and the brilliant leadership of Captain Don "Red" Goldstein, another bit of glory has been added to the pages of Tilden sports history.

Leaving basketball and turning to football, we find that last season was the first time Coach Bernie Mars took the reins of the Tilden "Eleven." The record books only list a 2 won-4 lost-1 tied final standing. Although on paper this might not look too good, the Bluedevil gridders never said "die," even after losing some heartbreakers.

One of the most outstanding games of the season was the 13-13 tie with Far Rockaway, one of New York City's powerhouses, on a mudsoaked field. The boys were 20 point underdogs in that game.

The "turkey day" tilt with Jefferson was close all the way, until the final quarter when the Blue-devil's were overcome in the closing minutes and lost 18-14.

Away from the grit and grime of Tilden Feld, and down to the swift moving water of our pool, we see the proud ship of S. J. T. Defronzo, manned by the Tilden Mermen—victor in nine of its eleven seasonal encounters. She was torpedoed twice, by Tech and Manual.

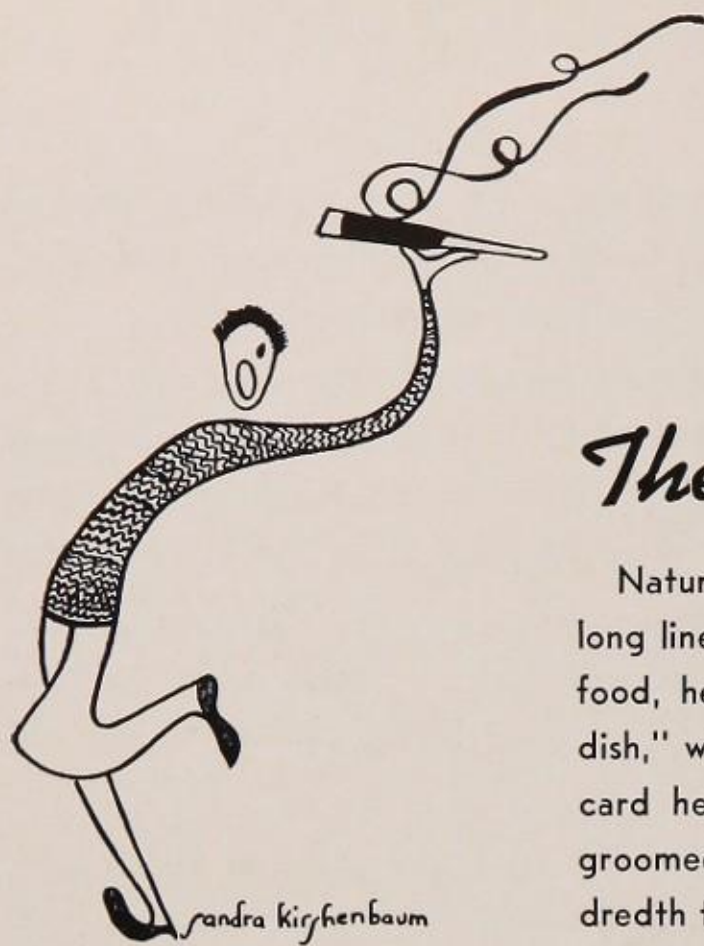

Captain Frank Donofrio won the 100 yard backstroke event at the individual swimming finals at NYU's Quigley Memorial pool. On the same night Tilden's highly rated tankman, Gene Adler, was defeated for the first time in PSAL competition. However, he is looking ahead to new success in high school meets, and is aiming for the '56 Olympics.

Leaving our subterranean "Brighton Beach," and hustling back to Tilden Feld, we see in the distance the Tilden baseball nine.

By the time "Classic" is published, the final baseball results will be history. We can't predict the record of this season's team. Without trying to compete with Nostradamus, we do feel that Coach "Spotty" Ginsberg and his Bluedevil "Inkspots" will, as in the past, try their hardest to make a fine showing for themselves and the school.

With vets of previous baseball wars back, such as Joel Tandler, Jerry Latowitsky, Pete Balter, Burt Rodney, and Charlie Lombardo, prospects appear bright to us. Nevertheless, as one of our eminent school historians has said, "If our hindsight were as good as our foresight, we'd be better off by a darnsight." So, here's hoping this season will be a bright one for our baseball team.

BRUCE STAVE
MARTIN KROLL

The "Bon Vivant"

Naturally, he was a gourmet. Stemming from a long line of renowned chefs and fanciers of unusual food, he was often called with affection, "a prize dish," with a background of good meals. His option card held gracefully but firmly between his well-groomed fingers, he glanced casually for the hundredth time at the magic letters marked in the sixth period box. The word "LUNCH" shone brilliantly in letters of red upon a white background while the shaded tones of "Geometry" and "French" faded into nothingness.

The roar of myriad voices jarred his sensitive ears as he was precipitated into the cafeteria which was, he thought, quaintly named. Attributing the boisterous atmosphere to the character of all good basement restaurants, he looked expectantly about for the head waiter. Finding no such person, he shrugged his shoulders with the knowing look of the sophisticate and casually made his way to a long table occupied by a lovely young lady whose costume boldly attested to the fact that she was a member of the "Boosters." No sooner had he smiled suavely at what he hoped might be a charming luncheon companion, than he became aware of a glaring pair of eyes above his head and the choking sensation of his collar tightening around his neck, as it was forcibly pulled from behind.

"Whaddya mean sittin' here? Don'cha know where the boys' seckshon is, bud?"

His attempt at assuming a nonchalant attitude as he crossed the room to the designated spot was hindered by the giggles of the young ladies. Hastily covering his confusion, he deftly picked up an over-turned, three-legged chair, placed his books on the somewhat sullied table-top and took his place on the line of friendly young men who, he guessed, were discussing philosophy as they waited to be served.

The assured smile that was the mark of the worldly young man returned to his face as he neared the steam table where the array of delicacies, he was certain, would be endless. As he stood unable to choose between the deep sea tuna fish nestled between layers of crisp green lettuce and a sandwich of what were assuredly plovers' eggs, he was thrown headlong, accidentally, he was sure, into the foreign food section and quickly given a china plate heaped with what the scholar to his left identified as "Cha Men." By this time he was unfashionably hungry and, carefully concealing his Duncan Hines Club membership pin, he took the proffered plate and placed it on what appeared to be an antique silver tray. Wine, he found, was not to be had in this astonishing restaurant, so he gratefully accepted a cardboard container of milk whose warmth was somewhat of a puzzle to him.

After informing the person who had mistakenly taken his seat that that place had been reserved, he picked up his scattered books from the floor and placed his tray on the table. He watched his tablemates for a moment and, murmuring something about "when in Rome," began to consume his lunch as his companions were—using two spoons—the only available silver. This last custom justified for him the popularity of the cafeteria.

Suddenly the heretofore non-existent waiters appeared and his tray was whisked away with marvelous efficiency. What did it matter if he had scarcely tasted his lunch; the service was certainly good!

Then a peculiar feeling overtook him. Tables, chairs, crowds of people swam before his eyes. Salads, sandwiches, and hot plates seemed to reel about him. He feebly made his way to the door with an unsteady step. Leaving his most prized possessions with the doorman as security, he hurriedly staggered out of the lunchroom and entered the medical room, confident in the knowledge that several physicians were waiting to aid him.

TOBI BERNSTEIN

EDITORIAL

Thomas Jefferson wrote, "if any nation expects to be ignorant and free in a state of civilization, it expects what never was, and never will be." History proves that the wealth of a nation is not determined merely by its natural resources,—its lumber, coal and iron, but also by its intellectual resources—the minds of its men. We can trace history from ancient times to see how countries and civilizations have been destroyed because their own people were denied the right to educate themselves as individuals, to develop their minds as individuals, and to act as individuals. The old Roman Empire, the Napoleonic Empire and the fate of the Axis Powers serve as vivid examples.

Man's hope lies with the younger generation which has the tremendous task of safeguarding and improving our civilization. This will be accomplished with education, for it is education which has helped to make man's hopes and dreams materialize. The recent development of the polio vaccine illustrates dramatically the value and necessity of making education available to all. Jonas Salk, the scientist responsible for the vaccine, was not deprived the privilege of attending college because of his lack of financial resources. His exceptional talent was not overlooked but was cultivated, enabling him to lift the fear of a dread disease from the hearts of men.

With education, today's children can and must be taught to understand, to help, and to live peacefully with others. They must know that all men are basically the same; their hopes and their fears are the same; and only if they work together can their dream of a better world be realized.

Yes, the search for truth is of profound importance. With confidence in his creative ability, man can be taught to utilize his freedom for the common good. This is the goal of education—the study, discussion, and understanding of problems common to all humanity. Without constructive purpose, man's mind and body are in chains; without it, democracy and civilization die; with it, freedom survives and we can look toward the future with confidence and hope.

UNDECIDED
He's really a swell fellow,
In spite of the gleam in his eye.

GERALD SOLOMON

178 East 95 Street
Mail Sq.
UNDECIDED
A combination of smiles and wit,
A swell guy, we'll all admit.

LAWRENCE SWANBERG
